Dear Mr/Mrs, Editor, etc.

After reading an article in your publication, I noticed that you have written the capital city of Ukraine as Kiev. As a Ukrainian-American who is proud of my Ukrainian heritage and who knows the Ukrainian language, I respectfully ask you from this time forward to spell this city as Kyiv. This transliteration into English most closely represents its pronunciation in the Ukrainian language. For many years under Soviet occupation, Kyiv was written as Kiev, which is the Russian transliteration. As Ukraine has entered its 19th year of independence, I believe that, by correctly spelling the capital city as Kyiv, one is recognizing the importance of the Ukrainian language, and giving respect to Ukraine and its people, as well as to Ukrainian-Americans. It is worth mentioning, that the government of Ukraine and the United Nations have officially been using this transliteration of Kyiv.

In recent history, just as Peking was changed to Beijing, and Bombay to Mumbai, according to transliterations from their own languages, Kyiv likewise deserves the same consideration.

Thank You and Kind Regards,
